(Please enter <http://>) http://www.saudeambiental.org/ENG_html/index.html General Information: One of the biggest challenges of our time is the awareness of the relationship between the Environment and Human Health. The climate changes will affect, negatively, some of the determinants of health: food, air and water. To address this challenge we need to investigate and share knowledge in the domains of Environmental Health. During three days, you are invited to join us and network with professionals, academia, researchers and students willing to discuss the changes and the incoming challenges the Environmental Health is facing. CISA is the ideal platform to promote this discussion over the relationships among health, environment and development, thus enabling the arising of proposals and knowledge to ensure life quality and health of the populations.
